SIR JAMES PLIMSOLL

Our Patron, Sir James Plimsoll, died suddenly in Office on July 8, 1987.

Sir James honoured us by agreeing to become our Patron early this year. We mourn the passing of a distinguished Australian.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

by Neville Jetson

I would like to thank my committee for their work for the Society during the current year, especially as I shall have been absent since mid-March.

All members should be grateful to Audrey Hudspeth and her team for producing a journal of such high quality each quarter. I'm sure most members are not aware of the hours of work involved.

During the few weeks I've spent in the UK, I've visited numerous centres where records of genealogical value are housed and have been impressed by the increased participation by local interest groups in many areas. In some cases, these groups are co-operating with Record Offices in sorting, cataloguing, indexing and copying projects with the ultimate aim of making general records accessible more readily to researchers.

In May I shall be attending a week's Irish Origins Congress in Dublin and Kilkenny and any knowledge gained I hope to share with members upon my return.

As the AGM approaches, I would urge members to consider the future of the Society. If you are not happy with the direction it's taking, why not attend the meeting and put forward your suggestions as to how it should proceed. If you think the Society would be better served by a new committee, come and vote accordingly. On the other hand, should you be in favour of what is being done, the committee would be pleased to know.

The message is - the future of the Society is in your hands but only if you exercise your democratic right and speak up for what you believe to be the correct path to follow. Be a front runner, not a back stabber. Successful researching to you all.

MEMBERS PLEASE NOTE!

If you change your address, please notify Publications Co-ordinator direct who will inform Branch and State Secretaries and Treasurers.

The Convict System

Compiled by Mrs Maree Ring

A convict in the family? Does it conjure up a picture of your ancestors' harsh existence at Port Arthur? But this settlement did not open until 1830, finally closing in 1877.

I, too, once believed the fallacy that this is where Tasmania's convict arrivals went to serve their time, but now, knowing that there were about 74,000 convicts here between 1803 and 1853, I stop and wonder where they were all housed.

In 1824, when Lt Gov George Arthur came to this colony, almost 50% of the population were convicts. He aimed at gaining for the colony a reputation for machine-like discipline, hoping to deter the criminals in the United Kingdom. He implemented the transportees sentences of hard labour; every convict knowing the reward for good conduct was comfort and freedom, and that bad behaviour incurred punishment, until they succumbed by having offenders sent to lower classes and using punishments such as the bread and water diet, the lash and solitary confinement.

Arthur divided the convicts into seven classes:

Class 1 - Tickets-of-leave were granted at the Lt. Governor's discretion for good behaviour, being withdrawn promptly for bad conduct. This reward freed the men from most restrictions of convicts, permitting them to own property, and work for wages which were often higher than those of the average free man because the ticket was proof of good conduct. Approximately 10% of convicts in the mid-1830's were class 1.

Class 2 - Assigned convicts were given into the care of particular settlers who had to feed and clothe them and in return the convict had to serve the settlers in whatever way the latter determined. These accounted for 50% of convicts in the colony.

Class 3 - Employed on public works by the Government.)
Class 4 - Those in the road gangs.) 20%

Class 5 - Those sentenced to hard labour, about 5%.

Class 6 - Men convicted of offences in the colony and sentenced to severe hard labour under rigid surveillance in the penal settlements.

Class 7 - Same as class 6 but had to serve their sentences in chains.

These last two groups comprised about 5%. The remainder of convicts were invalids.

Assignment was the core of the system until 1840 and as two thirds were employed on the development of the Colony, the Government did not have to bear the cost of their upkeep.

On arrival in Hobart Town, a convict ship was visited by the Principal Superintendent of Convicts who opened records of every prisoner aboard and was responsible for the destination and employment of the convicts. These records were maintained during the term of the convict's sentence and could be referred to within a few minutes. After a few days, the convicts were landed and addressed by the Lt. Governor who explained the elements of the system. They then were moved to the Prisoner's Barracks until their disposal. Any money in their possession was banked on their behalf being repaid at 5% interest on completion of their sentences. Unindexed records July 1838 to December 1853 exist.

The Chief Police Magistrate was a Justice of the Peace who tried offences, authorised the movement of convicts and kept their records. A list of assigned convicts was kept, but in pencil, and with movement, the notation was erased and then again rewritten in pencil, so now it is uncertain to whom many individuals were assigned. Only minor fragments of records with this information have survived.

Women and children were treated differently from men. The boys' station at Point Puer was opened in 1834 to ensure the boys were kept apart from the men and that their reformation and return to society was faster.

Women were divided into three classes: class one, those suitable for assignment; class two, those who had committed minor offences and class three, the crime class, which was the largest category. Those sent to the Female House of Correction also known as the Female Factory, Cascades, South Hobart, as a matter of course had their hair shaved off. Different graduations of punishment included time at the wash-tub, solitary confinement, wearing of an iron collar (abolished by Arthur) and others which varied from period to period. Women did not have to submit to flogging. Many of the convicts were returned to the factory pregnant and had their children there.

Prisoners received sufficient food, had proper medical attention and were hospitalised when necessary.

Religion was believed to have an important part to play in a prisoner's reformation, and Wesleyan missionaries were appointed at Port Arthur. Marriage was found to improve discipline in both men and women convicts and was not discouraged, though permission was needed from the Government. (I have found that though permission may have been granted, the marriage ceremony was not always enacted, presuming that the couple took permission as legality of the union.)

A convict's family could be brought out to join him at Government expense, if he was thought worthy of this indulgence, and the family given a small grant of land. Often a married convict remarried in Tasmania as his prospect of returning to England was limited by his conditional pardon, and it seems that if the man or woman had been absent in the colony for at least seven years, it was perfectly legal to consider him/herself single again and to choose a second wife or husband.

(English law stated if a couple were parted by water for more than seven years, even if both parties were still alive, each would be free to re-marry and the resulting union would not be bigamous).

When Arthur took office, there was only one penal settlement for class 7 prisoners, and that had opened in 1822 on Sarah Island, Macquarie Harbour, on the west coast (setting for part of Marcus Clarke's "Term of His Natural Life"). In 1825, a second settlement was opened on Maria Is. for class 6 men. Port Arthur followed in 1830 and the two former settlements were closed in 1832 and the men transferred to Port Arthur.

A probation system which began soon after 1842, sent convicts to work on probation stations for a prescribed period, the length depending on the original sentence, to the following scale:

7-10 yrs:	2 yrs probation
10-14 yrs:	2½ yrs "
14-20 yrs:	3 yrs "
20-life:	3 yrs "
Life:	4 yrs "

They were formed into gangs, originally of 250 - 300 men, but later 300-400 men. These gangs were sent to stations in unsettled districts to work on agriculture and roads, and the men were placed in three classes depending on the treatment they were to receive. The chain gangs were class three and lived in separate cells, while class one men were allowed to live in huts with little supervision. Convicts were encouraged to move up through the classes, by their good behaviour. After completion of the probationary period, a convict received a probation pass, then a ticket-of-leave and later a conditional pardon. (Usually conditional that he did not return to the UK). This system collapsed due to several reasons, including the result of a general depression in the colony that meant ticket-of-leave holders often failed to find work and by 1846 3,000 of them were unemployed. Many stations were unprofitable, and the increase in convicts arriving was more than the economy could stand.

Transportation ceased in 1853 but convicts had to complete their sentences.

The last Tasmanian convict is believed to have died in 1918.

Have you ever been tempted to ignore that letter that had just arrived from another researcher, minus return postage stamp or international reply coupons? Recently, replying to such a letter from New Zealand became a bonus for me.

The families in question came from Cornwall, but they were obviously not related. (Another reason not to reply). However, in answering the letter, I mentioned that my grandfather Ernest, had gone to New Zealand in the early 1900's with his wife and young family, and at the commencement of WW1 enlisted there, being killed at Gallipoli within the first week of the ANZAC landing.

Very soon I had a reply (and an apology for lack of return postage) with news that my correspondent's daughter had, on returning from England, visited Gallipoli and because of the coincidence of her mother's name and that of my grandfather (initial and name alike) had photographed his headstone.

I was delighted to receive this week, just before the commemoration of the 72nd anniversary of the landing at Gallipoli, and of my grandfather's death, a copy of the photograph of his last resting place; something other members of my family have not yet seen.

Something that I would have missed if I had ignored that letter!

If convict already married ask if there is record of him/her applying for family to come out. This will give ship name

10

Dont forget to check if more children born after wife's arrival

11

Now you should have a complete record of your convict.

SEARCHING FOR YOUR CONVICT:

A GUIDE FOR THE BEGINNER

Check marriage index for date given.

Check if convict had permission to marry. If so it may show that wife/husband was also a convict. If permission was rec'd you will be given name and date.

Check convict indent (from convict ships book) for description, native place (NP) and often family names. Description list can also be helpful. See next to indent in convict ships book.

From microfilm you will obtain your convict's date of trial, ship and further sentences. Places of internment & date of ticket of leave, conditional pardon or free cert.

Archives - 10th Floor through Reference Library State Library, Murray St, Hobart.

Give convicts name to assistant who will give you a number or the ships name. Don't forget to sign the book.

Check your convicts no. with convicts ships book which will give you convict record no. = Con Convicts ship book on counter. Ask for assistance as this can be difficult the first time.

Write convict record no. on card provided and receive microfilm.

ROLL CALL - A GUIDE TO GENEALOGICAL SOURCES IN THE AUSTRALIAN WAR MEMORIAL
Compiled by Bill Fogarty, Kate Hobbs, Paul MacPherson, Michael Piggott, Bronwyn Self and Peter Stanley.

This guide explains what is available for those who wish to trace their ancestors who served in the armed forces, and makes interesting reading with the introduction of 17 case studies taking the reader step by step through what could be a similar case to their own.

Available for $7.95 from the Australian War Memorial Shop, GPO Box 345, Canberra, ACT, 2601.

LEMON, ANDREW AND MORGAN, MARJORIE: POOR SOULS, THEY PERISHED: The 'Catarqui', Australia's Worst Shipwreck. Hargreen Publishing Co., North Melbourne, 1986. 188 pages.

This book gives an account of how 400 people died when the emigrant ship Catarqui was wrecked in Bass Strait in 1845. The authors have made a painstaking study of documents about both the voyage itself and the events before and after it, and as a result they have been able to correct errors contained in earlier versions of the story. Fourteen pages of notes and sources testify to the authors' thoroughness; but, although the book contains many references and quotations, the style is pleasant and readable.

The account of the voyage is interesting in itself; but to people working on their own family histories the book offers more than just a story well told. It is a fine example of genealogy in action. Other books tell how to find and assess information. This one shows what researchers can achieve by doing the things that are recommended.

Amateur researchers will take heart from the book because it shows how much information about obscure and ordinary people can be won from the records available to most genealogists. All it takes is patience, persistence, and a great deal of time. Family historians will also be encouraged to learn that, no matter how experienced researchers might be, there is just no answer to some of their questions. Even the most skilful researchers come to dead ends.

Other books deal better than this one with particular facets of free emigration, but few touch on so many topics of general genealogical interest in such a small space. In addition to the main story, the authors give a useful summary of several facets of emigration to Australia in the 1840's; the Emigration Commissioners and their agents; the bounty system; the management of emigrant ships; the encouragement to emigration given by the operation of the Poor Laws in the British Isles.

The authors also tell their readers a good deal about the discovery and charting of Bass Strait; the early history of King(s) Island; the nature of the Port Phillip settlement and its relationships with Sydney; and the way the bureaucracy worked at the time.

Each of the topics mentioned above is dealt with briefly but effectively. There are more than fifty maps and halftone illustrations and a full index. The appendix contains detailed lists of the ship's passengers and crew. The authors' real triumph is their reconstruction of the faulty and inconsistent lists made soon after the wreck.

HUGH CAMPBELL

THE FORGOTTEN GENERATION OF NORFOLK ISLAND AND V.D.L. by Reg Wright.
Library of Australian History, Sydney, 1985. 17 Mitchell St, N. Sydney, NSW. pp204 . Price $22.25

We in Tasmania can be grateful to Reg Wright for the years he has laboured to produce this book. It gives a clear picture of the beginning of both the administration and individuals on Norfolk Island from 1788-1813. Population, Land Settlements and Employment are covered in depth during this period in easy to follow tables. Many of the settlers on Norfolk Is. were one time Soldiers and Convicts (men and women) with a small number of Free Arrivals. Many had arrived on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd fleets. From 1806-1813, a large number of these were brought to VDL by ship and the author has listed each family by name under the appropriate ship. Genealogists and researchers alike will appreciate the easy accessibility to the 1805 Norfolk Is Muster and the 1818 Hobart Muster (no more strained eyes from searching fading hand written lists.)

It is not, however, only valuable as a reference; it is also delightful reading for those interested in Norfolk Is., the early days at the Derwent, convicts and ships.

INDEXING OF TASMANIAN DEATH RECORDS

The Society has, over a long period, collected many records. The largest and one of the most important of these are the records of monumental stones in graveyards. Another is the collection of newspaper advertisements. It is time we used computers to index these and place them on microfiche.

Mr Willy Scott, with the assistance of a friendly computer programmer, has devised a program to do just that. The program is fairly flexible and can easily be adjusted. It consists of up to two lines and includes: Name of person, husband or wife, date of death, age or date of birth, a reference number, a remarks area (used in most cases to refer to another name on the same stone or advertisement), a space for 'kin' (relatives). It cannot be quite as complete as the card index, but it will be a lot easier to use and to duplicate. It will also be possible to utilize this program in the VOL Index.

The first program is made on an IBM computer, but it is expected that it will be possible to adapt it for other computers. More work is needed for this however.

It is proposed that this index should include at least the following:

* all cemetery records * advertisements from Tasmanian newspapers *any other records of similar nature.

It will be a record of all persons deceased in Tasmania or whose death has been of sufficient importance to Tasmanians to advertise or include in inscriptions.

We have a number of members and friends who own or have access to computers whom we should ask to participate in this program. Once the information is collected, it is possible to place this on microfiche. There are at least three ways we can do this:

1. We can pay someone to do it commercially
2. It may be possible to have it done by some organisation in Tasmania, perhaps the University
3. The Genealogical Society of Utah will do it free of charge; they will even do it from printouts if we do not manage to make all our computers compatible with each other.

It is not possible to predict how long it will take to complete, but it cannot be completed until all the cemetery records have been collected. Apparently that work is close to completion.

A word of advice to people planning to buy a computer. An IBM compatible will make it easier to participate in the indexing program. Likewise there is more and cheaper software available for IBM than any other computer.

For more information contact Mr Villy Scott on 002-49 3970.

LEE FAMILY REUNION

On May 14, 1827, William LEE and Mary EAST were married in the Geddington Church of England, Northampton, England. They left immediately for Tasmania on the ship 'Orelia' arriving in Hobart Town on October 6, 1827. William and Mary travelled to Cressy on a bullock dray. William worked at Panshanger and Richmond Hill and subsequently purchased 'Creekside' where he farmed. They had five sons and five daughters:

Eliza	married	Henry GURR
Alice	did not marry
Samuel	m	Agnes THOMPSON
William	m	Violet THOMPSON
George	m	Mary Ann SMITH
Charles	m	May OLIVER
John	m	Matilda BURTON
Charlotte	m	Frederick BURTON
Elizabeth	m	John BURTON
Mary	m	Charles TITMUS

On Sunday October 4, 1987, a reunion will be held for the descendants of William and Mary LEE in the grounds of the Cressy District High School commencing 10.30 am. The occasion will be a BYO everything, with the school buildings (in particular the Home Economics Dept) being available.

Further details may be obtained from Ross Buckley on 003-522 477 or 003-523 174.

REYNOLDS FAMILY

In February, the descendants of David and Mary REYNOLDS gathered to celebrate 170 th anniversary of their marriage. Family members numbered 280, being from all parts of Tasmania and some from Victoria and NSW. All family branches were represented.

David Reynolds arrived in Tasmania in 1813 and went to work for Daniel and Alice Stanfield at Green Point (nr Bridgewater). He married their daughter Mary Ann in 1816 and they settled at Pontville. They had five children and David drowned on the Derwent River ferrying farm produce to Hobart Town in 1834, aged 40.

THE AUSTRALIAN BICENTENNIAL
HISTORIC RECORDS SEARCH

This is a major heritage project funded by the Australian Bicentennial Authority and conducted with the support of the National Library of Australia.

It is a nation-wide search for historically significant, paper-based records held in private hands.

The aim of the Historic Records Search is to locate and list the existence of records such as photographs, diaries, letters, ledger-books, minute books, old postcards, newspapers, maps and plans. The Search will not collect this material, but will simply record it so that researchers know it exists. Descriptions of the records will be fed into a computer in Canberra to create a National Register which will be then available in libraries throughout Australia.

Thirty Field Officers for the Historic Records Search were recently appointed throughout Australia. Tasmania has three Field Officers: Ms Christine Milne in Devonport, Ms Miranda Morris-Nunn in Launceston, and Ms Dianne Snowden in Hobart. Ms Snowden is the only full time Officer and will cover Southern Tasmania and the West Coast. She can be contacted at the State Library in Hobart on 002-307528 or 30 7484 (message).

Further Information

The Search will seek to maintain a balance between identification of the contents of the records and the rights owners have to maintain their own privacy. Owners may, if they wish, withhold their names and addresses from the Register. Researchers will have access to the Register through major libraries and archives.

What will the Search register?

Family papers; minute books, financial records and correspondence in the case of small businesses; printed materials that have not found their way into public collections.

A series of courtship letters written in the 1880's or even the 1960's might offer a valuable insight into social attitudes of the day. Letters or diaries written by soldier settlers can enrich our understanding of Australian land settlement. An immigrant's letter of the 1950's can tell historians something about the experience of migration and the problems of life in a new country. Though state libraries and museums hold examples of such material, much more remains out of reach in private ownership.

You can ask for information on how to care for your records.

THE CATHERINE COLLEENS

by Reg Wright

Although no convict transport carrying reluctant female immigrants was directed to VDL until 1820, between 1814 and 1818 some 350 convict women were transferred from Sydney to the Derwent. Perhaps the most interesting of these transfers, was that of the 60 women who reached Hobart in September 1814 aboard the Navy ship HMS Kangaroo. Governor Macquarie had toured VDL in 1811 and noted the unhealthy imbalance of the sexes on the Island. The arrival of Catherine at Port Jackson in May 1814 with 97 Irish convict women, provided Macquarie with the opportunity to improve the position; he directed that 60 of the women be carried southwards on Kangaroo with 40 assigned to settlers at the Derwent and 20 to Port Dalrymple.

The improbable story of the wanderings of the Kangaroo along the Australian and Tasmanian coastline between May and her eventual arrival at the Derwent in September, would require a much longer narrative; however it seems that three of the 60 passengers ex Catherine were in poor health and had to be discharged ashore at Port Jackson in August when, after an absence of 67 days during which it had not reached the Derwent, Kangaroo made a surprise return from Port Stephens on the north coast of NSW. The sickly women were replaced by another Sydney based colleen from Catherine and two other convict women. Kangaroo was quickly turned round and again directed southwards to the Derwent, and arrived 15 September. The 19 unfortunate women who were later sent on to Port Dalrymple aboard Kangaroo, were not rowed ashore until 5 November 1814, and had thus spent more time travelling from Sydney to their destination than on their journey from Falmouth to Port Jackson.

There are a number of contradictory and confusing records covering the women from Catherine. The official indent, at COD 140, is complemented by an Irish indent, Reel AL 2419, at the NSW Archives, but although the order of listing, the sentence, and spelling of names is identical, the ages differ remarkably on these two records. The indent at the Tasmanian Archives of Catherine convicts consigned to Kangaroo, 24 May 1814, for transfer to the Derwent, was obviously prepared from a duplicate of the Irish indent. Governor Macquarie's secretary, Thomas Campbell, also found it necessary to prepare his own indent of Catherine passengers at Sydney, 6 May 1814, and apparently relied on the women to correctly name themselves and nominate their sentence and trial date. Not surprisingly, this record at the Mitchell Library has a dearth of women with life sentences; however, although the names, spellings and trial dates also differ markedly from those in the official indents, Campbell's corrupted information continued to be used in many of the later NSW convict records, including the Alphabetic Listings of Convicts in NSW appearing on PRO reels 60, 61, 65 of the A.J.C.P.

In 1815, Earl Bathurst requested that Macquarie provide him with annual Alphabetic Returns of convicts, with their status, so that relatives in Britain could be informed of the whereabouts and circumstances of errant family members. In March 1816, Macquarie confirmed that these annual returns would be provided but pointed out that it was a lot of trouble, and that although a clerk had been occupied on the task for three months, the first return was far from complete. Earl Bathurst could hardly have envisaged the manner in which descendants of these deported people would eagerly peruse the Alphabetical Listings of Convicts some 160 years later. Unfortunately it seems that in subsequent returns, numerous short cuts were taken to speed up the onerous task of preparing this report. There is evidence that a report for a new year was prepared by copying from a previous year, and that old indecipherable pages were simply omitted from the new record; perhaps in the transposition process a line or two was missed, and thus in the new report a convict could obtain a new but erroneous history. Although the Alphabetic Returns obviously do provide useful data about many people, the information presented for a large number of Catherine convicts, particularly those who had disappeared to VDL, could not have been reported to the compilers, and therefore causes records from this source to be severely discounted.

The attachment shows information gleaned from various Tasmanian sources, for Catherine women who reached VDL. Some 36 identifiable women were married in VDL while a further 5 were buried at the Derwent within a few years of their arrival. Other Catherine women who were married under names of Mary Lewis, Mary Dignum, Johanna Bryan and Mary Hatcher have not yet been identified. At various times between 1816-21, practically all the identifiable Tasmanian colleens appear in the Alphabetical Listings as residents of districts around Sydney, usually with strange husbands, even though Rev Knopwood may have buried some individuals in earlier years, or the Derwent Muster of 1822 confirmed the continued residence of others in the Southern Colony. The Listings of NSW convicts apparently appear to contain a great deal of erroneous information for women from Catherine.

The search for the women of Catherine continues; however, the writer would like to hear from any Catherine descendants who could help pinpoint the four unidentified wives mentioned above, or who might know of legends of events during the extended voyage of the Kangaroo to Hobart.

Extracts from Chairman's Report April 1987

Membership of the branch has continued its strong upward trend with perhaps last year being our best ever. It is good to see all state branches had similar growth - a sign of a healthy, progressive society. In spite of some heavy spending during the year, our financial position is at its strongest ever, and this augurs well for the future. This is mainly due to the fund raising activities by the committee convened by Bev Perkins. Close to $3,000 was raised and shows what can be done when the effort is made. Our thanks and congratulations to Bev and her committee.

Having established that we do not have to pay import duty should we buy the St Catherine's House Birth Indexes 1837 forwards, it is certain this year will see the introduction of these records to the Library. Our present premises are not large enough to cope with a massive increase in use by members and general public brought about by having these records. We hope the 1987 State Annual Meeting to be held in Launceston this year will be a great success. It will be an entirely new format spread over two days. Your attendance for all or part of the weekend will do you and the Society a great service.

Launceston has also been chosen to host the 1991 Congress of Australian Family History Societies which is indeed a great honour. Members from all parts of Australia and overseas will be attending and cooperation from all Tasmanian members is sought to make this a feather in the cap for the State.

Extracts from Library Report

This has been a tremendous year for the library. From our modest beginnings at CarrVilla we finally moved into our new and larger premises in Patterson St on a wet day in June, but the sun has shone for us ever since. We have grown and will continue to grow, thanks to the efforts of members.

We have extended opening hours:-

Tues: 10am - 2pm

Wed: 12pm - 2pm and 7-9pm

Sat: 2pm - 4pm

All sessions being well supported by both members and visitors.

Our holdings have greatly expanded with the addition of the following microfiche: New Zealand pre 1901 Death and Marriage Indexes, NSW Convict Indexes 1984, Scandanavian IGI 1981, European IGI and 1984 UK and Misc IGI. There are 82 new books, many donated, and journals, family notes etc have also been donated.

We currently have on order with the Victorian Government Statist, the Death & Marriage Indexes for 1897-1914 and letters have been sent to other states enquiring about new releases of these indexes. The St Catherines House index project is well under way, with the aim of purchasing microfilm indexes of English Birth, Death and Marriage post 1867. It is our hope that during the next year we will see some of these indexes in our library.

Church and Cemetery records have continued to be carded and added to our files. Carr Villa records have filled nearly one drawer of the cabinet and our thanks go to Mr Kennedy at Carr Villa for allowing us to copy them. Carr Villa records are a great asset and these records will be bound into books. Cypress St Cemetery book has been another valuable asset. It was purchased by state, and compiled after 10 years research by Pat Hinds. Our library books are in the process of being colour coded for ease of selection, and when completed, you will pick the subject and find the correct colour code. A new library list book is also being prepared which will list everything available in our library and where to find it. This will include the book colour code index.

Janine Wilson, Ag Librarian.

The Examiner Index Project has proved a great success, 1900-1920 being completed and bound in 2 volumes with over 100 copies of each being sold. Only a few copies of Vol 1 are now in stock. The transcribing has begun on the next volume in the hope it will be complete for 1988.

HUON

On 13 April, our AGM was held. Elections for office bearers were held and are as follows:-

Officer: Ann Leaman

We look forward to increasing the research facilities in our library with the acquisition of the microfilm of the RG's records of Births, Deaths and Marriages pre 1900.

A very welcome grant from the Bicentennial project has enabled us to purchase these valuable records, and we are anticipating an increase in the number of people using the library in the future. This may lead to a review of our opening hours.

We have a varied programme of guest speakers planned for the rest of the year, including Mrs Jean Cockerill, who will speak on the history of Cygnet and Mrs Debbie Carmichael from Glen Huon who will speak on the role of pioneer women.

1991 CONGRESS FOR AUSTRALASIA

At the February meeting of the State Executive of GST, the application by Launceston Branch to host the 1991 Congress was accepted. Pat Harris was appointed Congress Secretary and $1,000 was allocated for expenses. As it is hoped that the whole of our Society will be involved, each Branch was asked to submit the name of a representative at the next meeting in May. This small committee will be expanded as it becomes necessary.

Suggestions would be appreciated for a 'Theme' for the Congress. 1991 seems a long way off, but we need to take advantage of having so much notice, to plan the best Congress possible. This will be one of our best opportunities to promote Genealogy as a hobby, our GST and Tasmania.

Calling Murphys

Patricia Murphy is compiling a manuscript of all those who arrived in Australia by the name of Murphy. All states are represented and work is in progress. She would appreciate help in recording all births, deaths and marriages of Murphys in Tasmania.

Anyone interested please write to her C/- 23 Lloyd St, Belmont, Vic. 3216, or ring Irene Schaffer 310959.

Devonport Branch Journal Survey

We were very pleased to receive from Pat Haigh our Devonport Branch journal representative, the results of a questionnaire which the Branch had circulated to its members. We realise that a lot of thought and effort has gone into producing this, and appreciate it very much.

All the members of the journal panel have studied it with interest, and we were impressed by the perceptive and helpful comments.

Our most popular articles in the six-month period under review (March 1985-September 1986) were Conservation of Historic Records and How to Preserve Family Photographs (reprinted by kind permission of the Society of Australian Genealogists). These rated 76% and were followed by Absolute Beginners (June 1986) and Tasmanian Land Records (March 1986). Members' Queries rated highly and the least popular item was New Members (74% found it of no interest). One respondent felt too much information was aimed at filling the journal.

Open-ended questions about readers preferences for articles resulted in the following comments (a selection);

- . general information - what is found where
- . procedure, techniques that people have found useful
- . more shipping information
- . any articles with surnames and places of origin
- . Absolute Beginners - would like same for English, Irish and Scottish research beginners
- . it would be interesting to know what obstacles some members may have come across in tracing their history. Maybe there are some sad tales or funny ones to be told
- . members' problems and suggestions about how they may be solved
- . local history of North West Coast (over to you! We'd love to publish it if you write it! Ed)

Other requests were for convict history, articles on ships and shipping, and early Tasmanian pioneers, and for classic articles such as Land Record and Catholic Archives (University of Tasmania, March 1985), to be printed in A4 as separate publications. There was also a request for information

CLAN MACLEAN ASSOCIATION

The Secretary, Mrs Heather Kruger writes to advise us of the establishment in 1983 of the first branch of this association in Australia.

At this time we have 150 odd members throughout Australia and one member from Japan and another from New Zealand.

We welcome any relevant family history information for our archives, from persons and descendants of those bearing the surname Maclean, McLean, etc or any of the Sept names as listed. Alternative spelling for all names is accepted.

Where possible we will endeavour to help anyone seeking information, or with genealogical enquiries.

Further information from Mrs Kruger, 4 Westacott St, Hamilton, Vic. 3300.
(Ph 055-722061)

Who may join?

Persons bearing surnames (by birth or marriage): BEATH, BEATON, BLACK, GILLIAN, GILLEAN, GILZEAN, LEAN, MACBEATH, MACBETH, McFADYEN, MacCORMICK, MacFADZEAN, MacGILVRA, MacILDUY, MacILVERA, MacLERGAIN, MacRANKIN, MacVEY, MacVEAGH, PEDIN, RANKIN. Alternative spelling is accepted. Descendants down to the 4th generation are eligible. Ordinary members (3 yrs) $15. Notes 2.

about overseas and Australian publications and availability .

We will continue to use the survey as a useful check list. There is nothing we like better than publish an article full of helpful information, but they are not easily come by. Since the survey, there has been a helpful one on Scottish research by Anntionette Ralston and we would be delighted to have offers from some of our readers for others.

It is also evident that people enjoy personal explanations about how to seek information or solve problems. Personal experience has a freshness and relevance that readers appreciate.

We are very lucky in receiving a large number of unsolicited contributions. Naturally not all of these are suitable, given constraints of space, and we try to select those of general rather than specific interest. However, we appreciate them being sent to us all the same!

It is a sign of a healthy journal when there are too many contributions to be printed!
